THURSDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 4, 1858 A BEAUTIFUL LITTLE STORY.

A few weeks since, in coming down the North River, I was sitting in the cabin of the magnificent steamer Isaac Newton, in conversation with some triends. It was becoming late in the evening, and one after another seeking repose from the care and toils of the day, made preparations to retire to their berths. Some, pulling off their boots and coats, lay themselves down to rest; others, in the attempt to make it seem as much like home as possible, threw off more of their clething-each one as their comfort or apprehension of danger dictated. about six years of age, following around a Symptoms of Disease, by A. W. Barclay, M. man evidently his father, whose appearance D. $2 Just published, and for sale by indicated him to be a foreigner, probably a jan 27 ROBERT BELL. indicated him to be a foreigner, probably a German-a man of medium height and respectable appearance. The child was unu-eually fair and fine looking, handsomely featured, with an intelligent and affectionate ex pression of countenance; and from his cap fell clustering chesnut curls.

After walking about the cabin for a time the father and son stopped within a few fe t of where we were seated, and began preparations for going to bed. I watched them.

The father adjusted and arranged the bed the child was to occupy, which was an upper berth, while the little fellow was undressing. Having finished this, his father 'tied a handkerchief around his neck to protect the curls, which looked as if the sunlight from his young, happy heart rested there. This done, I looked for him to seek his resting place; but instead of this, he quietly kneeled down upon the floor, put Lis little hands together, so beautifully child-like and simple, and resting his arms on the lower berth against which he knelt, he began his vesper prayer.

The father sat down by his side and awaited the conclusion. It was a long prayer, for a child, but well understood. I could hear the murmuring of his sweet voice, but could not distinguish the words he spoke. There were men around him-Christian men retiring to rest without sufficient courage or piety to kneel down in a steamboat cabin and before strangers, acknowledging the goodness of God or asking his protecting love. This was the training of some pious moti-er. Where was she now? How many times had her kind band been laid on his sunny locks, as she taught him to pray?

The way the little son of Louis Napoleon takes his airing is a show for any one to see. though all may not regard it in the same way. He rides in a large coupe carriage, drawn by four horses, conducted by two postillions, and the nurse holds him up at the window, that the people may see this really fine looking baby. Two liveried servants on horseback precede the carriage about two hundred yards and are followed by half a dezen lancers. bearing, of course the small uniform flag upon each lance, as if to amuse the young-ter. Immediately in front of the leading carriage-horses is another mounted servant. and two others are seated in the rear. At the side of the carriage rides a gentleman in plain clothes, called in English an equerry, and in the rear is a detachment of lancers -perhaps ten or twelve in number-under the charge of an officer; the whole cavalcade moving at a rapid pace. To one who has had several boys quite as promising as this Prince, escorted at his age by a single nurse, this expensive show seems useless, if not ridiculous; but it is not so considered by the French people.

Two Yankee Girls at Portland were insu!- you any others wanted. them. The elder lady, finding that she could not get rid of him, determined to punish him for his impudence, and whispered to her younger sister to go home and place a pail of water on the steps where she could reach it when she arrived, and then consensented, and was just upon the point of entering her sister had placed there, and dashed the contents full in his face. The young man seemed thunderstruck for a moment, but when he recovered himself he struck a "bee line." and the last seen of him he was steering for home with all possible speed.

Knickerbocker tells the following good one: -A tall, green sort of a well-dressed fellow walked in a Broadway saloon the other day, where they were talking politics on a high key, and stretching himself to his full height, exclaimed, "Where are the Democrat-?-Show me a Democrat, gentlemen and I'll annum. show you a liar!" In an instant a man stood before the noisy inquirer in a warlike attitude, and exclaimed, "I am a Democrat, sii!" "You are? Well just step around the corner with me, and I'll show you a fellow who said I could'ut find a Democrat in the whole world. Ain't be a liar, I should like to know?"

L'SPECIAL NOTICE -Our sincere thanks are hereby tendered to all who have settled their accounts with us since our last issue of bills. But our principal object now is to call the attention of those who have not paid, to this notice. We want them to know that we are suffering for the use of the money due us, and hope that without delay those persons whom we have in good faith accommodated, will call or send in their settlements.
